

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

TELEVISION ACADEMY FOUNDATION'S NATIONAL PROGRAM
'ACCESS: BEHIND THE SCREENS' TO SHARE CAREER
INSIGHTS FOR TOMORROW'S MEDIA WORLD WHEN
'ENTERTAINMENT MEETS ENTREPRENEURSHIP'

(LOS ANGELES – Jan. 30, 2026) — The Television Academy Foundation today announced it will present the next offering in its series of free, national virtual events for students and early career professionals: “Access: Behind the Screens — Entertainment Meets Entrepreneurship” on Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11 a.m. - noon PST / 2 - 3 p.m. EST.

The live discussion will focus on how today's media landscape demands more than creative excellence. As the industry continues to evolve, emerging professionals must learn to think like entrepreneurs as well as artists — developing the business acumen, adaptability and strategic mindset needed to bring ideas to life and sustain careers over the long term. From developing IP strategies to forging strategic partnerships and tapping into emerging technologies, participants will gain practical tools to expand reach, diversify revenue and future-proof their creative work in this virtual classroom. By understanding how to build brands, navigate emerging platforms and turn innovation into opportunity, aspiring creators are better prepared to lead — not just participate — in the future of television and media.

The featured guest for “Access: Behind the Screens — Entertainment Meets Entrepreneurship” is the founder and CEO of Collective Moxie, Julie Ann Crommett. At Collective Moxie, a global storytelling, media-strategy and audience engagement agency, she advises top studios, brands and creatives on innovative strategies that reshape industries by driving transformative change at the intersection of entertainment, business and culture. Previously, Crommett led multicultural audience engagement at Disney, influencing billion-dollar hits like Encanto, Black Panther and Raya and the Last Dragon and spearheaded global DEI initiatives at Google and NBCUniversal. narrative, at AI-native studio Secret Level, will moderate. “Today’s creators must be as fluent in entrepreneurship as they are in storytelling,” said Tina Perry, chair of the Television Academy Foundation. “This event is designed to give those entering the entertainment industry an insider’s view of how creative vision, business strategy and innovation intersect in today’s media careers. Our goal is to equip emerging creators with the tools, confidence and mindset needed to lead in a rapidly changing media landscape.”

“Creativity is powerful, but ownership and strategy are what allow that creativity to travel, scale and endure,” said Crommett. “In this rapidly changing landscape, we’re all needing to be entrepreneurial; and that creates challenges but also opens up a world of possibility.”

Access: Behind the Screens is the Foundation’s education program that offers behind-the-scenes access to the television industry through master-class workshops and panel discussions with top industry professionals.
